
The RAID[®] Refresher Day

A 1-day refresher course

Executive Summary:

The 3-day RAID[®] course is the UK's leading positive psychology approach for tackling challenging behaviour at source: over 13,000 professionals have attended it. The purpose of the refresher day is to literally 'refresh' delegates who have previously attended the course: to re-invigorate them and to bring them up to speed with any developments that have occurred since they originally attended their training.

The Aims of The RAID Refresher Day:

- To revise the major components of the RAID approach.
- To address any issues that have become apparent for delegates implementing the RAID approach.
- To correct any misconceptions that have crept in since the original course.
- To 'set the clock running again' on delegates' access to RAID materials on the web.
- To literally 'refresh' delegates who have previously attended the course: to re-invigorate them.
- To bring delegates up to speed with any developments that have occurred since they originally attended their training.

The RAID Refresher Day covers the following:

- Getting back into gear: what delegates remember from their original training.
- RAID questions for the tutor: "open house" where delegates anonymously write down any questions they wish, for the tutor to respond to.
- RAID exemplars: the finest examples of RAIDing that delegates can produce, either from their work situation or from the domestic situation.
- Coverage from the tutor of any new materials, or any new "takes" on materials, that have occurred since the original training.
- Exercise: delegates use a RAID care plan template to form a model RAID care plan for one of their patients.

- "Fresh ideas": delegates exchange all their most difficult problems, and answer them for each other under the guidance of the tutor.
- Latest developments: the tutor covers other RAID developments such as: RAID centres of excellence; Management-RAID; the RAID parent-support programme.
- Prepared RAID puzzles: the tutor presents prepared RAID conundrums for teams of delegates to solve.
- Registration: delegates register, in order to receive their certificates, and to "set the clock running again" on their access to web-based RAID materials.

What this course will do for you:

- You will revisit the major components of the RAID approach.
- You can address any 'issues' that have become apparent in implementing the RAID approach.
- The tutor will spot and correct any misconceptions that have crept in since the original course.
- The clock will be 'set running again' on your access to RAID materials on the web.
- You will feel literally 'refreshed' in your approach to RAIDing, and to your work.
- You will be up to speed with any developments that have occurred since you originally attended your training.
- You will have the chance to address any RAID issues that have been on your mind or you are reminded of on the day.
